Holiday Traditions of Your Protection Team

About two weekends before Christmas, my dad's side of the family gets together. It's an all day affair. We first get together with the extended family, 4 generations, and eat lunch at the family restaurant and Santa shows up. After lunch, my dad's immediate family goes to one of his brother's houses and we continue to eat and open more gifts. It's a fun-filled day of smiles, laughs and family. I wish everyone a wonderful holiday season! - Vicki Colletti

The day after Thanksgiving, my husband and I will go out to dinner with my family in Glen Ellyn. We then go to the tree lighting in downtown Glen Ellyn. We then shop the local stores. On Christmas Eve, my husband and I will go out to dinner and than watch A Christmas Story in TV. On Christmas day, we go to our families homes and have dinner and exchange gifts. - Kristina Morris

Our Christmas tradition begins on Christmas Eve where we attend mass and host a family get together at our house. Pam makes her special recipe chili which is my all time favorite. On Christmas morning, we open presents and listen to Christmas music. In the afternoon, we head over to Pam's parent's house where there is always an abundance of scrumptious food items. Our family has grown over the years and I am sure we will add to the traditions, but I know that we will never veer away from the quality time we all get to spend together as a family. - Keith Armstrong

In our family, if you have little ones who still believe in Santa, the tree doesn't go up till after the little ones go to bed. The tree is part of the presents that Santa brings. As you can imagine, that makes for very late nights and early mornings, no sleep. When I was young my parents couldn't afford a lot, so that is why the tree became part of the presents that Santa would bring. My brothers and I would get up early in the morning and Oooo and Aaaaawww over the shiny tinsel and the sparkle of lights. And my mother used to sew little bags out of different colored fabrics and fill them with her homemade fudge and divinity and nuts and dried fruits. They'd be hanging all over the tree. We thought Santa brought them and we were more interested in those than the few presents under the tree. We received one gift that we needed and one gift that we wanted. My mother taught us the true meaning of Christmas and it's not about piles of gifts under the tree. It's about one special gift given to all of us. That's how I did Christmas with my children also. My children have carried on this tradition with their children, including the amount of gifts. And my grandchildren do what my brothers and I did and what my children did, Oooooo! Aaaaawwwww! And they race to see who gets the most "Santa Bags" off the tree. Merry Christmas everyone! - Kate Leahy

My family has a tradition of opening one gift on Christmas Eve, and then we head out to Christy's for dinner it is one of our favorite restaurants here in town. On Christmas Day morning we wake up early and watch my son open all his presents. He is our only child, only grandchild, and only nephew in the family. This sometimes lasts for what seems an eternity lol...he is very spoiled. After that for some crazy reason my son loves going to Burger King for an early lunch every year per his request. When we get home, I put A Christmas Story movie on every TV in the house and start cooking. The rest of the family joins us at our house to celebrate. Everybody brings a dish, and the boy's deep fry the turkey outside. After dinner it's on to drinks, music and board games. Here's wishing everyone a Very Merry Christmas and a Happy and Healthy New Year! CHEERS TO ALL! - Kelly Savage
